what do you lift?

From the Red Backpack:

From the Red Backpack:

Long have I hid
In the bushes of paradise
Ashamed of myself
And dreading your footsteps.
Long have I laughed
In the face of your promise
Believing that no One
Can do what I can't do myself.
Long have I fled
To the pastures of Midian
To comfortably ignore
The great sufferings of others.
Long have I lusted
After the wife of another
Bathing in silence
Beyond the walls of this palace.
Long have I lay
In a fit of self pity
Worn out and tired of running
Waiting for the sound of your voice.
Long have I wept
Outside the walls of my city
Knee deep in the ashes
Of all that could have been.
Long have I denied you.
Long have I betrayed you.
Long have I doubted you.
Long have I mourned your absence.
And long have I longed
To be finally made holy,
And I know that all will fall short of your glory
But the saints are those who get up again.
